Welcome to 2019 IPA Convention

Dear Colleagues and friends:

Welcome!

It is with great pleasure that as your President for the 2019-2020 year, I write to welcome each one of you and your guests to the Illinois Psychological Annual Convention, November 14-16, 2019. This years creative program involving intersectionality could not have been so thoughtfully developed without the incredibly active participation of our planning committee, and invaluable support of our Executive Director, Marsha Karey. It is therefore with immense gratitude that I give thanks to our fantastic IPA Convention Planning Committee members in seniority: Dr. Bruce Bonecutter, Dr. Cliff Saper, Dr. Laura Faynor-Ciha, Dr. Rahul Sharma, and our very special IPAGs leaders, Marc Chaney and Morgan Ferris. We have stressed the importance of including and involving students at every stage of the planning process and have been amazed at their enthusiasm and commitment. I have had such fun working with our team! We hope you find the program as informative, engaging, and interactive as we have strived to create for you.

To give you a brief preview: The program has three primary tracks: Research, Practice, and Training. We added a fourth track due to the relatively large number of proposals we were able to accept, and successfully placed presentations within their tracks and themes. Each day will start with a debriefing session by the Planning Committee to process the prior day's sessions. We invite speakers from the previous day to attend if possible.

THEMES:

Thursday: Exploring Intersectionality: A Primer for Psychologists

Friday: Specifics and Insights into Intersectionality

Saturday: Actionable Steps to Incorporating Intersectionality

Thursday's program stars four speakers, with Dr. Rahul Sharma who opens our Convention Keynote address in what will surely be an exciting way! He is followed by Dr. Elena Quintana and Dr. Ingar Burnett-Zieglar, both highly respected psychologists who highlight critical issues in intersectionality within the Latinos and African American communities. Our afternoon keynote, Dr. Kevin Nadal, urges us with a Call to Action to intertwine intersectionality within all areas of practice, training, and research in psychology. On Friday, we dive into the depths of the specifics and on Saturday, we join together to create actionable steps and future goals. The aim of this convention is to collaborate and engage in discussions on intersectionality, which will fuel our ability to utilize best practices when engaging with our patients, students, and colleagues. I look forward to what will be an excellent event!

Sincerely,

Kalyani Gopal, PhD, HSPP

Welcome from the IPA Executive Director

Dear IPA Convention Attendee:

Welcome to the IPA 2019 Annual Convention! As Executive Director it has been a pleasure to work with Dr. Gopal on this year's annual convention. Dr. Gopal and her convention committee have worked tirelessly to put together a broad scope of programs.

I hope that you will take full advantage of the opportunities offered at this year's annual convention. In addition to the learning offered by continuing education programs, the convention also enables you to network with your colleagues, exchange information and to learn from one another.

Don't miss Thursday's all-day workshop; Exploring Intersectionality: A Primer for Psychologists. The presenters are experts in Intersectionality. This presentation will include fun and unique elements.

I encourage you to take time to visit with our exhibitors, inquire about their products and services and make them feel welcomed. Walk through the Student Poster Session; your feedback means a lot to them. This year the Student Poster Session will be held later in the day and will be displayed at the President's reception.

The IPA Annual Awards Luncheon will take place on Friday, and there will be food breaks throughout the day. We hope you will attend the President's reception Friday evening. The President's reception is nice way to catch up with old colleagues and make new ones, as well as a great networking opportunity.

Keep in mind the continuing education hours you earn at this convention will apply to those required by the State for your next licensing period. Attend the entire convention and you will earn 15 continuing education credits.

I would like to thank the IPA CE Committee, for their efforts in approving each of the workshop learning objectives. I also want to express gratitude to everyone on the convention committee and to all the volunteers.

I look forward to meeting all of you and learning how the IPA can better serve our members and all psychologists in the state of Illinois.

Sincerely,

Marsha Karey

Executive Director, Illinois Psychological Association

Arrangements for Persons with Disabilities

The Illinois Psychological Association is committed to accessibility and non-discrimination in continuing education activities. Presenters and attendees are asked to be aware of the need for privacy and confidentiality during and after the program. Additionally, if a participant has special needs, she/he should contact Marsha Karey, 312/372-7610, x201, to discuss what accommodations can be provided by October 23, 2019.

All questions, concerns, or complaints should be directed to Marsha Karey.

“Making Meaning Making Music: Experiencing Multicultural Drumming, Affirming Identity, & Enhancing Belonging”

With Funkadesi's Rhythm Ambassadors:
Kwame Steve Cobb, Carlos Antonio
Cornier, Maninder Singh, and Rich Conti

Given the increasing recognition in our field that we must do better in addressing issues of social justice and inclusion, and increase our multicultural competence (as practitioners, researchers, advocates, educators, and concerned professionals), we must look to innovative proven methods that address the complexities of these issues. Combining the latest theory and evidenced-based methods of facilitating difficult dialogues on issues of diversity and inclusion, and utilizing evidenced-based innovations with group drumming, this conference-wide session synthesizes multiple strains of proven techniques that strike a balance between being welcoming and engaging while addressing important issues. In particular, this session offers a unique approach to affirming individual and community identities while promoting mutual belonging. The session will begin with Dr. Sharma providing a brief overview of principles that have guided the intercultural musical project he founded, Funkadesi, for over two decades. This overview will be followed by Funkadesi's Rhythm Ambassadors providing each audience member with a drum, and leading hands-on, experiential drumming sections (Latin Clave rhythm, Punjabi Bhangra rhythm, West African Lamba rhythm, and more). Reflecting the Funkadesi Rhythm Ambassadors' signature Indo-Afro-Caribbean rhythmic connection, the session will culminate with the entire audience playing each cultural rhythm they just learned in order to weave together a sonic intercultural fabric. The session will close with audience members self-reflecting on their experience of making intercultural music, and Dr. Sharma underscoring relevant themes, take-homes, and potential applications.

Funkadesi's Rhythm Ambassadors

ABOUT THE PRESENTER

Rahul Sharma, PsyD

Dr. Rahul Sharma is a strategic consultant, speaker, psychologist, and musician. He received his doctorate in Clinical Psychology in 1998, specializing in multicultural psychology. He is former Director of the University of Chicago's Resources for Sexual Violence Prevention. Dr. Sharma was Associate Professor at the Illinois School of Professional Psychology (ISPP) and Chair of its Diversity Concentration for 13 years. In addition, Dr. Sharma is founder and bassist/sitarist for the intercultural award-winning music group Funkadesi, comprised of diverse members (Indian-American, African-American, Jamaican, Latino, and European-American) who are musicians, activists, educators, and healers.

Dr. Sharma has used music as a vehicle for advancing emotional intelligence, leadership, and cultural competence. He recently served as an NEA grant review panelist for proposals that apply art to community wellness and equity endeavors. In 2017, Dr. Sharma was the recipient of the Joyce Foundation Award, commissioned to co-write a musical piece "Quantum Englewood" that was performed by hundreds of musicians, aiming to provide arts opportunities for youth in the Englewood neighborhood. The critically acclaimed performance took place in September 2018. Dr. Sharma also trained Evanston's Police Department on mental health response, integrating issues of diversity and community concerns. Most recently, he has partnered with Depaul University's Theatre School as a strategic consultant on system-wide issues related to diversity, communication, and leadership.

Dr. Sharma continues to train, consult, deliver keynotes and lectures, & lead workshops on many topics related to diversity, social justice, mental wellness, music, and healing.

Learning Objectives:

1. Participants will be able to list 3 techniques via experiential musical and large group facilitation techniques to address issues of diversity, identity, and belonging.

Intersectionality of Minority Mental Health, Poverty and Race with Regards to African American

Several large-scale epidemiological studies have demonstrated that African American adults are less likely to have most psychiatric conditions than those who are white. However, when taking into account the impact of social determinants of health such as education, income, employment, and neighborhood environment, African American adults are at increased risk for chronic stress, traumatic stress and depressive symptoms. Further, African American adults are 50 percent less likely to access mental health treatment and when they do, they are less likely to receive guideline concordant care. This presentation will provide an overview of epidemiological research on the comparative prevalence of the most common mental illnesses among African Americans and the concrete and psychological barriers to access and engagement in treatment. Specifically, the impact of ethnic identity as protective against the development of mental illness and barrier to participation in treatment will be discussed. This presentation will highlight the ways in which cultural beliefs and practices interact with the healthcare system in ways that result in inadequate care provided to African American communities and persistent disparities in mental health. In close, the presentation will address individual and health system methods for achieving mental health equity.

Inger Burnett-Zeigler, PhD

Dr. Inger Burnett-Zeigler is a licensed clinical psychologist and associate professor in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences, Feinberg School of Medicine at Northwestern University. Dr. Burnett-Zeigler utilizes traditional psychotherapy and complementary and integrative health approaches to help clients with mood and anxiety disorders, stress management, interpersonal relationships and wellness. Dr. Burnett-Zeigler is passionate about eliminating mental illness stigma and assuring that all individuals have access to high-quality, evidence based mental health care. Her research program focuses on examining the factors associated with access and engagement in mental health service utilization and using this data to develop, test and implement acceptable and accessible evidence-based interventions in community-based settings. Inger's long-term goal is to improve mental and physical health among socio-economically disadvantaged individuals by creating a sustainable model to efficiently deliver effective interventions in community-based settings. Dr. Burnett-Zeigler's research has been featured in The New York Times, TIME magazine, The Hill, and Chicago Tribune. She is on the board of directors for several large healthcare non-profits including Heartland Alliance Health and Thresholds.

Learning Objective:

Participants will be able to list 3 predictors of mental illness and treatment participation as they relate to the role of social determinants of health, race/ethnicity, and culture.

2:30 PM - 5:30 PM

Program Description:

“Calling All Psychologists: The Ethical Imperative of Intersectional Social Justice”

Throughout the history of the United States, there have been many social movements that have resulted in an array of historic societal outcomes—ranging from the end of racial segregation to women’s voting rights to the legalization of same-sex marriages. Despite the positive outcomes derived from political activism, many psychologists have struggled with how to advocate for social justice, while maintaining their professional responsibilities and ethical boundaries. The current presentation will review the historical ways that psychologists have participated in political movements- from the use of psychological research in landmark U.S. Supreme Court cases to psychologist-led pushes for policy changes in psychology, medicine, and other mental health related fields. Next, a critical review will be provided of some of the major controversies or dilemmas regarding psychology, social justice, and political participation—including:

(a) ethical concerns and professional boundaries, (b) the utility of political neutrality in psychology, (c) psychologists’ balance and self-care, (d) psychologists’ lack of advocacy training, and (e) beliefs of the role of social justice advocacy in psychology. Finally, the presentation will conclude by discussing the concepts of “intersectionalities” and “psychologist-activist”—highlighting the many ways that psychologists across various subfields and institutions can combat oppression on individual, interpersonal, group, and institutional levels, through a critical intersectional lens.

ABOUT THE PRESENTER

Kevin Nadal, PhD

Kevin Leo Yabut Nadal, Ph.D. is a Professor of Psychology at both John Jay College of Criminal Justice and the Graduate Center (GC) at the City University of New York (CUNY). He is the author of over 100 publications and 10 books, including Filipino American Psychology: A Handbook of Theory, Research, and Clinical Practice (2011, Wiley), Sage

Encyclopedia of Psychology and Gender (Sage, 2017), Microaggressions and Traumatic Stress (2018, APA). He is the past President of the Asian American Psychological Association (AAPA), the former Executive Director of the CLAGS: The Center for LGBTQ Studies at CUNY, a national trustee of the Filipino American National Historical Society (FANHs), and the founder of the LGBTQ Scholars of Color Network. A scholar-activist, he has written for Huffington Post, Buzzfeed, and New York Times, and he has been featured on NBC, ABC, CBS, Fox, PBS, The Weather Channel, The History Channel, and more. Dr. Nadal received the American Psychological Association Early Career Award for Distinguished Contributions to Psychology in the Public Interest in 2017, was named one of NBC’s Pride 30 in 2018, and received the Thought Leader Award from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation In 2019

Learning Objectives:

1. Participants will be able to identify 2 historical examples of social justice activism within the field of psychology
2. Participants will be able to cite 2 examples of how the APA Ethics Codes are related to issues regarding social justice activism
3. Participants will be able to define 2 practical ways that psychologists can integrate activism into their professional and personal lives

The Emerging Public Health Crisis of Recreational Marijuana

With the recent passage of legislation by the State of Illinois the drug marijuana will now be available to adults for its recreational use. This will make Illinois the 11th state to legalize its use as a recreational drug. There are those proponents who have aggressively advocated for legalization and those who are concerned about the consequences. On the political spectrum, the issue of legalization for recreational use is divisive. Looking at those concerns expressed, this presentation will review and synthesize the public health and public safety impact of marijuana in those ten states that have legalized the drug. There is also a growing body of literature that discusses the bio-psycho-social consequences to the use of high grade grown marijuana which will be included in the presentation.

How Constant Collaborative Care Builds Your Practice

Improving use of physician time and appointment availability makes it possible for physicians to delegate much of the behavioral health care to psychologists. Failure to coordinate care, to manage transitions in levels of care, and to address lapses in care continues to impede healthcare in our society. Integrated behavioral care promotes offering psychological services at the primary care point of contact between patients and physicians. All providers and the institutions supporting their work are dedicated to enhancing public health. Care coordination makes services more widely available.

Likewise, this addresses the relationship between physical and psychological health and illness. Care coordinators funded by insurers are dedicated to assisting patients in transitions of care. Moving from more intense to less intense treatment settings have affected partial success in ensuring continuing care for patients who must adjust to increased self-management. Emphasis on the demonstration of efficacy of psychological intervention techniques has made accountability for the use of scarce health care dollars an ongoing focus.

This program will also review BCBSIL/ HCSC initiatives which target enhancing the coordination of, and collaboration in care by providers and funding institutions; it will offer ideas for improving the quality of care received by our patients through enhanced care coordination

Psychologist in Divorce: Family, Community, and Court

Divorce can be one of the most impactful transitions to individuals both in how they interact with their world, and how their world may impose changes on their identities. Psychologist have an important role in aiding the interactions of our clients: in their families, in their community, and in the courts. We will trace a family case study as they make their decision, as they choose what method of divorce (mediation, collaboration, litigation), as they respond to various choices along their journey of separating (custody evaluations, court-order therapy, child alienation, parenting coordination, reunification therapy, assessment of special needs of children, parental substance abuse and untreated mental illness) Our objective will be to improve the identity and credibility of our profession as psychologist as we help clients negotiate the difficult changes in our clients' interconnectedness.

TOTAL (STEP 3A + 3B) LEGISLATIVE ASSESSMENT FEE: $60 + $ _____ = $ _____

Explanation of the Licensed Psychologist Legislative Assessment Fee: The mandatory Base and Supplemental Legislative Assessments are collected exclusively for IPA Legislative and Advocacy activities. The IPA continually defends the rights of psychologists to continue to provide the services for which they are trained. The IPA also monitors activities and advocates for legislation that has an impact on the consumers we serve, consumers who are not organized to protect themselves. Legislative assessments are charged to all Illinois licensed psychologists with the rationale that even those psychologists who see only a few patients a week do so because the IPA works to protect that right.
